MOBY MARK TWAIN, [From the Galaxy.] A few months ago I was nominated for Governor of the great State of New York to run against Stewart L. Woodford and John T. Hoffman, on an independent tacket, I somehow felt that I had one prominent advantage over flese gentlemen, and that was, good character. It was easy to see by the newspapers, that if ever they had known what it was to bear a good name, that time was gone by. It was plain that in these latter years they had become familiar with all manner of shameful crimes. But at he very moment that I was exalting my advantage and enjoying it in secret there was a muddy and undercurrent of discomfort "riling" the deeps of my happiness, and that was the having to hear my name bandied about in familiar connection with those of such people. I grew more and more disturbed, Finally, I wrote to my grandmother about it. Her answer ame quick and sharp. She said: "You have never done one single thing in all your life to be ashamed of-not one. Look at the newspaers; look at them, and comprehend that sort of characters Woodford an l and her helpless family of a meagre plaintain patch, their only stay and support in their bareavement and their desolation. Mr. Twain owes it to himself as well as to the great people whose suffrages he asks, to clear this matter up. Will he do it.?

I thought I should burst with amazement. Such a cruel heartless charge—I never had seen Cophin Chi-na! I never had heard of Wakawak! na! I never had heard of Wakawak! I did not know a plaintain patch from a kangaroo! I did not know what to do. I was crazed and helpless. I let the day slip away without doing anything at all. The next morning the same paper had this nothing more same Twain, it will "Significant.—Mr. Twain, it will he observed, is suggestively silent about the Cochin China perjury."

about the Cochin China perjuty.

[Mem.—During the rest of the campaign this paper never referred to me in any other way then as "the infamous perjurer Twain."]

Next came the Gazette, with this:

"Wanted to Know.—Will the new candidate for Governor, deign to explain to certain of his fellow-citizens plain to certain of his fellow-citizens (who are suffering to vote for him!) the little circumstance of his cabin-mates in Montana loaing smail valuble articles from time to time, until at last these things having been invariably found on Mr. Twain's person or in his 'trunk' (newspaper he rolled his traps in), they felt compelled to give him, a friendly admonition for his own good, and so tarred and feathered him and rode him on a rail, and then advised him to leave a permanent vacuum in the place he usbally occapied in the camp. Will he do this?"

Could snything be more deliberately malicious than that? For I never was in Montana in my life.

[After this, this journal customarily spoke of me as "Twain, the Montana thick"] I got to picking up papers apprehensively—much as one would lift a desired blanket which he had some ides might have a gattlesnake under it, One day this met my eye:

THE LIE, NAILED !— By the sworn
of the Five Points, and Mr. Kit Burns and Mr. John Allen of Water street, statement that the lamented grand father of our noble standard bearer, John T. Hoffman, was hauged for highway robbery, it is a brutal and gratuitous lie, without a single shadow of foundation in fact. It is disheartening to virtuous men to see such shameful means resorted to to achieve political success as the atmeking of the dead in their graves, and defiling their honored names with slander. When we think of the anguish this miserable raisehood must cause the innocent relatives and friends of the deceased, we are ulmost driven to incite an outraged and insulted public to summary and unlawful vengeance upon the traducer. But no let us leave him to the agony

The ingenious closing sentence had the effect of moving me out of bed with despatch that hight, and out of the back door also, while the "out-raged and insulted public" surged in the front way, breaking furniture and windows in their rightness indigna-tion as they came, and taking off such property as they could carry as they went. And yet I can lay my hand of a lacerating conscience-(though i

But, after all, I could not recede. I was fully committed and must go on with the fight. As I was looking listlessly over the papers at breaklast, I came across this paragraph, and I may truly say I may be was so compared to the could be political ruin by adapted for new countries, where convicted of perjury by thirty-four witnesses, in Wakawak, Cochin China, in 1863, the intent of which perjury was to gob a poor native widow and her helpless family of a meagre ting out of it, and so in deep humiliaa mass of baseless charges, and/mean, and wicked faisehoods, but I never finished the task, for the very next morning a paper came out with a new grave should be opened. This drove me to the verge of distraction. On the top of this I was accused of em-ploying toothless and incompetent old relatives to procure the food for the foundling hospital when I was Warden. I was wavering—waver-ng. And at last as a due and fitting climax to the shameless prosecutions that party rancor had inflicted upon me, nine little children of all shades of color and degrees of raggedness, were taught to rush on the platform at a public meeting, and clasp me around the legs and call me pe.

I gave it up. I hauled down my colors and surrendered. I was not equal to the requirements of a Gubernatorial campaign in the State of New York, and so I sent in my withdrawal from the candidacy, and in the bitterness of spirit signed it. Truly yours, once a decent man, but

THE NEW AND THE OLD

The following extract from Jacksons farewell message has a strange sort of reading when compared with the history of radical legislation for the past ten years ; yet strange as they may seem, the doctrines of the "Old Hero of the Hermitage" are just as sound to-day as they ever were, and are the only bulwark of safety to the republic. Coming as they do like a warning from the grave of one of the purest and noblest patriots that ever lived, their re-production at this time is both timely and appropriate:
